It's the Boys Again OUR BOYS' CLOTHING

We have selected our fashions to meet the requirements of cuteness, nattiness, durability and vaguer; designing to conform with the "cute" age, the "rough-house" age, and the "sit-up-and-take-notice" age.

OUR LION BRAND SUITS FOR BOYS

this season are better than ever and combine all the essentials and reinforcements necessary for the boy who is hard on clothes. A boy wears his coat out first at the elbow. Lion Brand has double elbows of cloth there, and it lasts longer. A boy wears knickers out at the seat and knees. Lion Brand have an extra piece of cloth right where they wear out first, and the seams are stitched twice and the linings are the best we have ever seen in Boys' suits. This makes a good reason why you should ask for this make; and the price is no higher—that's another good thing about it.

A suit at $5, $6 and $7.50 is fully guaranteed and cut in the very newest style.

The meeting called to elect a School Trustee last Saturday was a fizzle, although luckily for the town a good man was secured for the position in the person of Mr. D. Shantz, who of course was elected. It's nearly time that the back-woods method of advertising by sticking a notice in the postoffice was done away with. It is doubtful if half a dozen people noticed it.

A charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct was brought against a resident of the town and heard before H. B. Atkins, J. P., on Monday morning. The accused pleaded guilty and on a question from the J. P. stated that a party staying at one of the livery barns gave him the liquor. The J. P. fined him $5 and costs, amounting altogether to $8, with the advice that if the party appeared before him again he would have to send him to jail at Calgary.

Friday Day of Mourning

Friday has been proclaimed a holiday by the Dominion authorities and every one is supposed to observe that day as a day of mourning for King Edward VII, who will be buried on that day. While no arrangements have been made in Didsbury for any religious services it is hoped that the residents will observe the day with due regard for the occasion. All stores and business places will be closed on that day.

Cheap Lumber

There is quality in lumber, do not forget that. Poor lumber means a cold crude house, difficult to live in, difficult to rent, and difficult to sell. I carry cheap lumber suitable for some purposes, but the kind you want in your house I make a specialty of. My best grades I store in weather proof sheds. Did you ever consider how much your carpenter's time cost you to work up your lumber. I am not advertising any cheap sale but I sell cheap always. Quick sales and small profits is my motto. Have you seen that shipyard I am selling at $20.00 per M? Have you seen those boards at $18.00 per M? I carry a complete stock of lumber. Anything you want you will find in my yard. No cash deposits required. You get what you see and buy and both quality and satisfaction is guaranteed.

If you contemplate building, call and see me. I can figure on that plan and tell you what it will cost any time.

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" BRINGS RELIEF

MRS. FRANK EATON

Frankville, Ont., Sept. 27, 1906.
"I suffered for years from headaches and pain in the back, and I consulted doctors and took every remedy obtainable without any relief. Then I began taking 'Fruit-a-tives', the famous fruit juice tablets, and this was the only medicine that ever did me any real good. I took several boxes altogether, and now I am entirely well of all my dreadful headaches and backaches."

Direct Testimony

"You said you made a personal examination of the rural magistrate. What did you find?"
"Oh, nothing of consequence," answered the witness; "a beggarly account of empty bottles, as Shakespeare says."

"Never mind what Mr. Shakespeare said," rejoined the rascal. "He will be summoned to testify for himself, if he knows anything about the case."

New Use for Glass Eve

A New Yorker says that he knows a man with a glass eye who makes it pay for itself many times over. The man goes around several times a year and buys jewels as a side issue. He puts one or two in the lost stone in his eye, and so smoothes them through the custom house safely.

Sores. Flee Before It.—There are many who have been afflicted with sores and have suffered away with Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil, which acts like magic. All similarly troubled should lose no time in applying this splendid remedy, as there is nothing like it to be had. It is cheap, but its power is in my eye expressed by its low price.

Acceptance Assured

It was the first poem she had ever written, and when she slipped it through the stamp window there was a tiny blue line peeping out of the envelope.

"How much postage?" she ventured.
"Why, Miss," responded the post-office clerk, "this is first class."

"Thank you for such a kind opinion," she hastened, "my, how I wish you were an editor."

CONNORS' CANADIAN SCHEME.

Buffalo Man Once Becomes Very Interested in the Dominion.

William J. Connors, of Buffalo, better known as "Fingy" Connors, has of recent years broken into the American magazines against his will. Since he became boss of the New York State Democracy, the "muckrakers" have been after him in full cry. His parents were Canadian Irish, but he was born in western New York State fifty-three years ago. He has risen from the position of dock laborer and keeper of a tough liquor dive, to the control of the grain-shovelling business of the American ports on the great lakes, and is a power in the Democratic party. Even the great William Randolph Hearst had to form an alliance with "Fingy" when he sought the Democratic nomination for governor of the state. He controls two journals in Buffalo of a more or less yellow character, The Courier and The Enquirer. Some ten years ago Connors developed a temporary affection for Canada, the country of his parents. It was at a time when he was at war with the longarmers of Buffalo and seeing himself beaten, he threatened to ruin Buffalo as a centre of grain transshipment by establishing vast elevators at Montreal and Quebec, the southern end of the Welland Canal. Hon. Richard Harcourt acted as his Canadian representative and the proposal went so far that when a party of Fenians tried to blow up the Welland Canal, it was generally believed for a few days that the conspiracy was the work of Buffalo grain-scoopers, grown desperate at the thought that Connors was going to permanently destroy their means of livelihood. Shortly afterward a settlement was reached between Connors and the "scoopers," and he immediately laid down on the Canadian proposition. Whether it was a bluff from the start, it is difficult to say. As a matter of fact, the proposition which Connors made respecting the elevator building was most unbalanced, and had he carried it out "Fingy" would have gone broke.

Veteran of Many Battles.

The Hon. Maurice Raymond Gifford, C.M.G., who intends, if possible, to come to Canada to participate in the union of the Riel Rebellion veterans upon the occasion of the 21st anniversary of the capture of Fort Qu'Appelle by Capt. French's scouts during the rebellion. Although raised scout, the little troop raised at Fort Qu'Appelle by Capt. French was really an independent cavalry troop, doing very little real scouting in duty. The men had to supply their own arms, horses and equipment and were paid five dollars a day. Young Gifford and a number of other young English gentlemen were farming in the Qu'Appelle valley at the time, and with the adventurous spirit of their kind, they readily enrolled themselves for the campaign. Gifford, who is the fourth son of Baron Gifford of Ampley Park, Gloucestershire, had been educated on the training ship Worcester and had for a time served as an officer in the mercantile marine. In 1882 he left the sea and went to Egypt as galloper for a newspaper correspondent, and at the end of the campaign came to Canada, going to the Northwest and taking up land. Few who participated in the campaign of 1882 associated the private of French's corps with the heroic Gifford of the Metabole campaign of 1890. When the Metabole campaign of 1890 occurred he raised two troops of irregular cavalry which were called "Gifford's Horse," and with which he performed distinguished service. He was at length severely wounded and had to have one of his arms amputated at the shoulder. The Boer war, despite his maimed condition, drew him out to South Africa, where he joined the Kimberley Mounted Corps, serving as Col. Mahon's staff at the relief of Mafeking.

Not So Dry As He Thought.

The other day a prominent divine connected with the Social and Moral Reform League, and the Lord's Day Alliance, and the Methodist Church, visited the House of Commons. He wished to appear in committee and make certain objections to proposed legislation that was being put forward in certain private bills. He appeared in the committee, making objections, but the bills went on their way just the same.

"The moral and spiritual life of the people," he contended, "would be killed."
This claim he confided to several of his acquaintances who were bawling about the bobbies. He asked for their support, and these obliging Parliamentarians took the reverend divine to one of the count tables in the green. The next morning he was summoned and asked for the orders he took down everything from Scotch and soda to ginger beer.
"Surely you do not sell liquor here," said the preacher.
"Oh, yes, sir," was the response.
"And just to think, I have been preaching for three years that you lads had abolished the bar in the House of Commons. No, thank you, nothing today," he replied.
And meanwhile the reverend divine discussed the observance of the Lord's Day while his companions drank their Scotch.

In the Present.

"And before I accepted him," Miss Pansy was saying, "I asked him if he would love me when I was old."
"The idea," exclaimed Miss Bright. "Why, if he proposed to you he had already proved that, hadn't he?"

LAY FOR WEEKS AT DEATH'S DOOR

BUT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS CURED MRS. THOMPSON'S DROPSY.

It started with Backache and grew worse till the doctor said she must die.

Holt, Ont. (Special).—All the countryside here is ringing with the wonderful cure of Mrs. Samuel Thompson, who lay at the point of death for weeks, swollen with Dropsy so that the doctor five different times decided to tap her but desisted because, as her husband said, "It might be better to let her die in peace." After the doctor had given her up Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

Mrs. Thompson's terrible trouble started with pain in her back, which grew worse and the doctor treated her for jaundice for eight weeks. Then she lay at the point of death for weeks, swollen with Dropsy so that the doctor five different times decided to tap her but desisted because, as her husband said, "It might be better to let her die in peace." After the doctor had given her up Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her.

As a last resort Dodd's Kidney Pills were tried. The improvement was slow, but gradually her strength came back. Today Mrs. Thompson is a well woman. She says that the countryside knows, she owes her life to Dodd's Kidney Pills.

If the disease is of the Kidneys, or from the Kidneys, Dodd's Kidney Pills will cure it.

A pastor at Atlanta resigned his charge in disgust because two of his deacons advertised that they would engage in a prize fight in the church as a tribute to the services, his indignation not being mollified by the subsequent explanation that they had never meant to fight and had made the announcement merely to draw a crowd.

Away With Depression and Melancholy.—These two evils are the accompaniment of a disordered stomach and torpid liver and mean wretchedness to all whom they visit. The surest and speediest way to combat them is with "Beecham's" Vegetable Pills which will restore the healthy action of the stomach and bring relief. They have proved their usefulness in thousands of cases and will continue to give relief to the suffering who are wise enough to use them.

A Fire Chief Mavhe

One day a sympathetic old German gentleman was sympathizing with one of the city fire engines, when he was moved by tears of the captain. Stopping to offer consolation he said: "Say, what for your grief?"

"Oh," replied the captain, with a fresh gush of tears, "my poor father is dead. If he had lived just one more day he would have been chief of the whole fire department, just think."

"Do not so sad feel," said the friendly old German, patting the fellow on the shoulder, "maybe he is a fire chief now."—Providence Journal.

Good Advice
"And now, son," said the old rabbit, "here's a bit of advice. Always keep on the good side of a dog."

"Oh, rubbish!" exclaimed her ladyship. "I suppose you expect the poor darling to apologize."

"All this has nothing to do with the case. We're more interested in learning where we are and where we are to go. Permit me to have a look about."

His wife stared after him in amazement as he walked over to the canvas awning in front of the low dock building, actually elbowing his way through a group of natives. Presently he came back, twisting his face into a grimace.

"The fellow in there says that the English agent is employed in the bank. It's straight up this street. By Jove! He called it a street, don't you know?" he exclaimed, disdainfully eyeing the narrow, dusty passage ahead.

"There's the British flag, my lord, just ahead. See the building on the right, sir?" said Mr. Saunders, more respectfully than ever and with real gratitude in his heart.

"So it is! That's where he is. I wonder why he isn't down here to meet us?"

"Very likely he didn't know we were coming," said his wife leily.

"Well, we'll look him up. Come along, everybody. Oh, I say, we can't leave this luggage ungarded. They say these fellows are the worst robbers east of London."

It was finally decided, after a rather subdued discussion, that Mr. Saunders should proceed to the bank and report on the dilatory representative of the British government. Saunders looked down the sullen line of faces and blanched to his toes.

"Tell him we'll wait for him," pursued his lordship. "But remind him, — him, that it's inexplicably not down here in the sun."

They stood and watched the miserable Saunders tread gingerly up the filthy street, his knees crooking outward from time to time, very much as if he were contemplating an instantaneous sprint in any direction but the one he was taking. Even the placid Deppingham was somewhat disturbed by the significant glances that followed their umbrage as he passed by each separate knot of natives.

"I do hope Mr. Saunders will come back alive," murmured Bromley, her ladyship's maid. The others started, for she had voiced the general thought.

"He won't come back at all, Bromley, unless he comes back alive," said his lordship, with a smile. It was a well known fact that very much except when his mind was troubled.

"Goodness, Deppy," said his wife, recognizing the symptom. "do you really think there's danger?"

"My dear Aggy, who said there was any danger?" he exclaimed and quickly looked out to sea. "I rather think we'll enjoy it here, — now that the moment's passed, which he saw that the steamer was getting under way."

The Jap company's tug was forthcoming to the pier. Lord Deppingham sighed and then drew forth his cigarette case. "There," he went on, peering intently up the street. "Saunders is gone."

"Yone?" half shrieked her ladyship.

"Into the bank," he added, scratching a match.

"Deppy," she said after a moment, "I hope I was not too hard on the poor fellow."

"Perhaps you won't be so nervous if you sit down and look at the sea," he said gently, and she immediately knew that he suggested it because he expected a tragedy in the opposite direction.

They expected every minute to hear the shouts of assassins and the screams of the brave Mr. Saunders. Their apprehensions were sensibly increased by the mysterious actions of the half naked loiterers. They made off in various directions, more than one of them handling his ugly crease in an ominous manner. Bromley was not slow to acquaint his lordship with these movements. Deppingham felt a cold chill shoot up his spine, but he refused to encourage the maid's fears by turning around.

"Your lordship," said Mr. Saunders three minutes later. "This is Mr. Bowles, his majesty's agent here. He comes with me to see."

It was then and not until then that his lordship turned his stare from the sea to the clerk and his companion.

"Aw," he interposed, "I don't see you, I'm sure. Would you be kind enough to tell us how we are to reach us — or — atleast why the dern we can't get anybody to move our luggage?"

Mr. Bowles, who had lived in Japan for sixteen years, was a thoroughly slow Englishman, with the curse of the climate still growing upon him. He was half asleep quite a good bit of the time and wholly asleep during the remainder.

"Everything is transferred by hand, my lord, and the chateau is two miles farther from the side of the mountain. It's quite a walk, sir."

"Do you mean to say we are to walk?"

"Yes, my lord, if you expect to go there."

"Of course we expect to go there, — there no horses on the beauty island."

"Hundreds, my lord, but they belong to the people, and no one but their owners ride them. The servants at the chateau turned Mr. Skinger horses out to pasture before they left."

"The servants, my lord."

Lady Deppingham's eyes grew wide with understanding. "You don't mean to say that the servants have left the place?" she cried.

"Yes, my lady. They were natives, you know."

"What do you go to do with it?" demanded Deppingham.

"I'm afraid you don't understand the situation," said Mr. Bowles patiently. "It's a very simple and regular controversy, if I may be so bold as to say so. Lady Deppingham is one of the angles; Mr. Bowles, the American gentleman, is another; the native population is the last. Each wants to be the hypocrite. While the interests of all three are merged in the real issue, there is nevertheless a decided disposition all around to make it an entirely one sided affair."

"I don't believe I grasp!" muttered Deppingham.

"I see perfectly," explained his wife. "The natives are all against us, just as we are in a way against them and Mr. Bowles. Really, it seems quite natural, doesn't it, dear?" turning to her husband.

"Very likely, but very unfortunate. It leaves us to broil our brains out down here on this pier. I say, Mr. — old chap, can't you possibly engage some sort of transportation for us? Really, you know, we can't stand here all day."

"I've no doubt I can arrange it, my lord. If you will just wait here, I'll run back to the bank I dare say I'll find a way. Perhaps you'd prefer standing under the awning until I return."

It was fully half an hour before he was seen coming down the street, followed by a score or more of natives, their dirty white robes flapping about their brown legs. At first they could not believe it was Bowles. Lord Deppingham had a sharp thrill of joy, but it was short lived. Bowles had changed at least a portion of his garb. He now wore the tight red jacket of the island troops, while an ancient army cap was strapped jauntily over his ear.

"It's all right, my lord," he said, saluting as he came up. "They will do anything I tell 'em to do when I represent the British army. This is the only uniform on the island, but they've been taught that there are more ways than one of coming from."

"I draw a party up the slope. They'll be here in a jiffy, my lady. Then, turning majestically to the husband, he bowed his head and disappeared and said: "Lively now! No loafing! Lively!"

Whereupon the entire collection of local residents, with their leader, picked itself up and walked off in the direction of the chateau.

CHAPTER VI. THE CHATEAU.

THE ROAD to the chateau took its devious way through the little town out into the green foothill beyond. Two lumbering wooden wheeled carts, now two creaks drawn by four perspiring men, served as conveyances by which the natives made the journey to their new home.

Lady Deppingham's pert little nose lifted itself in disgust as she was jostled through the town behind the grunting substitutes for horse-drawn. She sat beside her husband in the foremost cart. Mr. Bowles, very tired, but quite resolute, walked beside him. The servants came along behind in the second cart, their heads bowed in misery, toiled the unwilling luggage bearers. From the windows and doorways of every house, from the bazzars and cafes, from the side streets and mosque approaches, the gaze of the sullen people fastened itself upon the little procession. The town seemed ominously silent.

At last they came to the end of the sullen street and plunged into the stony road that ascended the slope through what seemed to be an absolutely unbroken though gorgeous jungle. The cool green dingle looked most alluring to the sun-baked natives. They could almost imagine that they heard the dripping of fountains, the gurgling of rivulets, so the paradise was the prospect ahead. Lady Agnes could not restrain her cries of delighted amusement.

"You see, my lord, it's a thoroughly slow Englishman, with the curse of the climate still growing upon him. He was half asleep quite a good bit of the time and wholly asleep during the remainder."

"Where are the mines?" asked Deppingham.

"The company's bluest mines are seven or eight miles eastward from the cross firs, quite at the other side of the island. It's very rocky over there, and there's no place for a landing from the sea. Everything is brought over to Anarat dock placed in the vaults of the bank. Four times a year the rubies and sapphires are shipped to the brokers in London and Vienna. It's quite a neat and regular arrangement, sir."

"But I should think the confounded natives would steal everything they get their hands on."

"What would be the use, sir? They couldn't dispose of a single gem on the island, and nothing is taken away from here except in the company's chests. Besides, my lord, these people are not thieves. They may kill people occasionally, but they are quite honest, being over to Anarat dock placed in the vaults of the bank. Four times a year the rubies and sapphires are shipped to the brokers in London and Vienna. It's quite a neat and regular arrangement, sir."

"They look so wretchedly poor."

"My lady," said Bowles, "there are but four poor men on the island — myself and the three Englishmen who operate the bank. There isn't a poor man, woman or child among the natives. This is truly a land of rich men. The superintendents of the mines are white men — German and the three foremen are Boers. They work on shares, just as the natives do, and save even more, I think. The clerk and the native natives. There were but ten white men here before you came, including two Greeks. Being part owners, the natives have a day's work for four hours constitute a day's work. They pay themselves accordingly."

"One day we met a negro, and almost fought with each other for the possession of the mirror, for here was a model indeed. He earned his living as a public performer inside public houses, and was a stable hand elsewhere. When we told him we wanted to paint him his face was a study. He was first amazed, then frightened. Again and again we humored him by telling him of our desire to paint him, but he eventually relented and agreed by asking, 'Will it come off?'"

She was again she felt impelled to go on. Miss Barlow related an amusing story of her connection with the poetess. The Cornhill. She submitted a short poem to Mr. Payne, the editor, and he, after reading it, returned it to her with a note saying: "I have no use for your poetry, but I have a use for your poems and sketches to The Cornhill and other periodicals before we venture upon her first book 'Boydland Stories,' which, by her father's advice, she signed by her own name. Next came the 'Irish Idylls,' which established Jane Barlow's position as a delineator of Irish life.

A JOYOUS CARTOONIST.

Tom Brown, the Famous Artist, Dies in Prime of Life.

Mr. Tom Brown, the well-known artist in black and white, died in London recently, at the early age of thirty-eight.

Mr. Brown will always be remembered as the creator of the two tramps, Wozzy Willie and Tired Tim, and as the originator of the boom in Dutch pictures.

His teacher taught Tom Brown how to draw. The instinct was there, and he found his models in the men and women of everyday life. He was only sixteen when he started out to work in Nottingham lace market, and it was about that time he sold his first picture.

The drawing represented an old Nottingham public-house and its very stout landlord, with a bibulous-looking soldier saying, "Time, gentlemen, please." The delighted proprietor gave the young artist five shillings for it, and hung it in his parlour.

When he was seventeen the young artist turned his footsteps towards London, where hard work soon took him into a foremost place.

His joyousness was the keynote of all his work, and he was indeed, in his whole life. He had a fund of merry anecdotes, and whether the points were good or not, or anybody else, he loved to relate them.

Mr. Brown once took a tour from Paris to London on a bicycle, and was accompanied by a friend, but as neither of them spoke Spanish the painter was obliged to make use of his pencil on all occasions. Only once did he utterly fail. Wanted to take a walk in the Bois de Boulogne, he drew an elaborate large sketch of a soup tureen. The mistress of the hotel, however, was so gravely, and so proud of her art, that she ordered her arms as if to convey the idea of size, and hurried away, leaving the artist considerably puzzled.

Presently she returned with beaming smiles, holding the sketch in her hands, and the biggest pal in the village in the other.

Once Mr. Brown was introduced to a lady, who said: "I'd like to make your acquaintance, Mr. Tom Brown. You are a public benefactor. Many a merry Christmas my family have had your crackles."

Tom Brown regarded this as his last story. He never tired of telling it.

Mr. Brown once told an interviewer that he remembered in his early days an adventure he had with a negro as a model. I say "we," because there were several of us, and we had our studio in the street, and he was not able to afford a servant to attend to our wants, so we each took it in turns to play "general."

"One day we met a negro, and almost fought with each other for the possession of the mirror, for here was a model indeed. He earned his living as a public performer inside public houses, and was a stable hand elsewhere. When we told him we wanted to paint him his face was a study. He was first amazed, then frightened. Again and again we humored him by telling him of our desire to paint him, but he eventually relented and agreed by asking, 'Will it come off?'"

Horsemen Held Big Meeting

One of the biggest meetings of farmers held in Didsbury took place on Tuesday afternoon to discuss ways and means for overcoming the present trouble that farmers and horsemen are having with their mare and colts this season. Amongst those present were Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture, Edmonton, and Dr. Foster, a Dominion government veterinary surgeon, of Ottawa.

The meeting was called to order about 2:30 and on motion Mr. W. Davies was elected chairman and Mr. R. B. Martin secretary.

The chairman opened with a few remarks as to the cause of the meeting and called on those present to describe their losses in colts so that Dr. Foster could assist them.

Several of those present stated the number of colts they had lost and the conditions prevailing at the time.

Dr. Foster stated that abortion is contagious but that so far as he knew the bacilli had not yet been located which caused it and advised those present not to breed their mares until more information on the matter was received, or if bred to thoroughly disinfect two or three times a week.

He advised everybody to thoroughly disinfect their stables with one quart of carbolic acid to five gallons of water; to immediately bury the colt and after birth, and to use an internal wash of one part of Bicarbonate of Mercury to 1,000 parts of water or one part of potassium permanganate to 40 of water.

The Minister of Agriculture stated that Dr. Clark, M. P., was on his way down here but had been detained in Oids. Dr. Clark sent word by Mr. Marshall that the meeting should be informed that he would do everything possible for the Dominion government to look into the matter.

Mr. Marshall suggested that a resolution be passed asking the Dominion Health authorities to take up the matter at once and to send the best man they had to advise the farmers. He stated that the Provincial government could not take up the matter as it came under the jurisdiction of the Dominion government, but that he would arrange for the bacteriologist in his department to take up the matter of inspecting any discharges or other matter sent to him by those interested and that he would co-operate with the farmers in every way possible.

The resolution was passed unanimously, and Mr. Marshall sent a telegram at once to the Health authorities at Ottawa regarding same.

Mr. Davies, who is largely interested, spoke emphatically of not breeding any of his mares this year as he thought this would be one way of overcoming the trouble as well as disinfecting horses and stables. It was the unanimous opinion of those present that all should work to gether to stamp out the disease.

A suggestion was made that those present form a branch of the Alberta

A Simple and Cheap Medicine.—A simple, cheap and effective medicine is something to be desired. There is no medicine so effective as a regulator of the digestive system as Parmenter's Vegetable Pills. That Revolver

Mark Twain in Roughing It, tells the following story of a revolver. "It appeared to me," he writes, "to be a dangerous weapon. It had only one fault—you could not hit anything with it. One of our conductors practised a while at a cow with it, and as long as she stood still and behaved herself she was safe; but as soon as she went to move about, and he got shooting at other things, she came to grief."

Patience—"Where in the world did you hear that?"

Patience—"My maid told me."

Patience—"Why, the man you're engaged to told him when the officer was taking him home."—Yonkers Statesman.

SORE FEET AND CHAFED PLACES.

"Zam-Buk" is best for chafed places, sore feet or inflamed patches caused by friction. For babies' sensitive skins it is especially adapted, because it is of pure herbal composition. Don't apply to the delicate skin of your children, either for cuts, sores or skin diseases, the crude salves made up from rancid animal oils or fats, with mineral coloring and scented matter to hide their unpleasant appearance and odor! Remember that whatever gets into the pores, gets into the blood. Stick to nature, and pure natural products. Zam-Buk is nature's own healer, and is, therefore not only superior in purity, but also in strength. Cures where other things fail. Use it, also, for piles, foot-sore, varicose ulcers, cuts, burns, and every-day injuries. Every home needs it!

Not Catching

A lady called at a real estate office to engage a store for a luncheon sale. The agent in charge told her he could not give her a positive answer, as there was sickness in the rooms over the store. After leaving, it occurred to her that the illness might be scarlet fever or one of the contagious diseases. Going back, she put the question: "Is it a contagious disease?" "No," it's a boy," replied the agent.

Council Meets

The Council met in the Council Chamber on Monday night, Mayor Atkins, Councilors St. Clair, Osmond, Moyer, Hunsperger, Good, Sec. Reed and Solicitor Patterson being present. Messrs. F. Moyle and M. B. Clement, former members of the Board of Health, having moved away it was moved by Osmond St. Clair--That Mr. G. B. Sessmith be appointed to the Board of Health for two years and Mr. W. Davies for one year. Carried.

Good-Hunsperger--That a rebate of 6 per cent. be allowed on all taxes paid in thirty days from October 1st.

The question of paving up and fixing the plot of ground north of the depot on Railway street was taken up and the matter was left in the hands of Councilors Osmond and St. Clair to arrange.

The Council took up the matter of setting the Department of Public Works, Edmonton, to assist in fixing the Roselud hill to make it less dangerous, and it was moved by Good-Hunsperger--That the Public Works Department be asked to assist the Local Improvement District to fix the Roselud hill which is in a dangerous condition. Carried.

The above motion will be handed to the local member of parliament to present to the department.

The advisability of the Mayor issuing a proclamation calling on all townspeople and business men to observe Friday as a civic holiday in memory of King Edward VII, who will be buried that day, was discussed by the Council, who decided that as other towns and corporations would observe the day that Didsbury should do the same. The Mayor will issue his proclamation to that effect. The Council then adjourned.

Local Masons Mourn

The Masonic Mourning service held for King Edward VII. Past Grand Master of the Masonic Lodge of England, held by the local Masons in the lodge rooms on Sunday afternoon was without doubt the most impressive service ever held in Didsbury.

The lodge room was tastefully decorated with the mourning colors of the King, black and purple, and in the center of the hall was a catafalque consisting of a rectangular platform on which were two smaller platforms on the top of which were placed an old Masonic apron, a pair of white gloves and an urn, the whole surmounted by a black canopy. The pictures of the dead King and Queen Alexandra were also hung with mourning.

Those who took part in the ceremony were J. A. Findlay, W. M.; C. L. Peterson, P. M.; C. C. Pearson, P. M.; W. H. Smith, P. M.; A. Studer, S. W.; J. E. Stauffer, acting J. W.; G. Liesemer, S. D.; F. N. Ballard, J. D.; G. B. Sessmith, Chap.; H. E. Osmond, S. S.; E. Morrison, J. S.; C. Hiebert, I. G.; J. Anderson, Tyler; H. B. Atkins, Organist. Mrs. A. G. Studer led the singing of the hymns "O brother thou art gone to rest," "When those we love are snatched away," "One sweetly solemn thought," and "Once more, O Lord, let grateful praise." Rev. M. announced the Eulogium and the ending prayer very acceptably to those present.

The one part of the service that seemed to impress those present was that in which the wardens, deacons and stewards with the Worshipful Master formed a procession and moved once around the catafalque to slow music and the Junior Warden placed upon it a bunch of white roses; the procession then moved twice around and the Senior Warden deposited a wreath of roses. The procession passed around three times and the Worshipful Master deposited a wreath of evergreens upon the urn as a token that the memory of their departed brother would always remain green in the hearts of his Masonic brethren. Each officer when placing his tribute gave a short address.

The lodge of mourning was closed with appropriate service.

Realizing What's What

The United States are waking up to the fact that Canada is fully competent to conserve her natural resources for the use of her own people. Time was when popular opinion in the United States tended to regard Jack Canuck as a hewer of wood and a drawer of water for Uncle Sam. But certain expressions of opinion of a contrary sort that are now continually cropping up in the American press show that this attitude toward Canada is fast giving way. Here is a sample from the editorial columns of the American Forestry Journal.

"Canada is measuring her timber resources and preparing to protect them by progressive and drastic measures against exploitation for the benefit of wasteful foreign countries, including her next door neighbor. We cannot look to the north for our salvation. We must husband all our remaining resources and plant trees wherever they can be grown more profitably than other crops, in order that our own future may be assured. This is the only way. Canada has not the resources for her own needs and ours too, and she is sufficiently wide awake and intelligent to guard her timber. The only way that our timber resources and Canada's can be made inexhaustible is by the application of the highest scientific knowledge and the broadest common sense."

The man who went out to milk and sat down on a boulder in the middle of the pasture and waited for the cow to come up, was a brother to this man who kept a store and wouldn't advertise because he reasoned that the purchasing public would back up to his place of business when it wanted something.

The boy who saves his money becomes the banker, the merchant, the professional man. The boy who never saves a cent makes the man who "earns his bread by the sweat of his brow," who never owns a home or enjoys the luxuries of life.
